

Career Opportunities

Graduates in gerontology find diverse and growing career opportunities in the field of aging. Examples follow:

- Adult Education Programs (and continuing education for older adults)
- Aging and the Built Environment (working with builders, architects and interior designers)
- Assisted Living Administration
- Geriatric Care Management
- Health and Aging (including program design and evaluation and health policy analysis)
- Home Health Care Management
- Intergenerational Programs (programs and services linking older persons with children and youth)
- Legal Analysis and Advocacy (including institutional advocacy, estate planning guardianship, tenancy, and elder abuse)
- Long-Term Care Administration (Leadership and Management positions and roles in aging, health and human services.)
- Marketing, Design and Product Development (developing and assessing the usability of new products for older adults and redesigning existing products in user-friendly ways)
- Multicultural Issues (designing and developing culturally sensitive programs and services for older persons)
- Nursing Home Administration
- Senior Center Management (coordinating and developing recreation and leisure programs)
- Technology and Aging (consulting with those who develop and administer computer software and develop ways to use technology to improve existing programs)
- Volunteer Program Management
- Workplace Issues (Older adult workers rights and re-training for multiple careers in human resources)

For further opportunities in aging, see

www. (Link to AGHE)
(Insert Careers in Aging)