To Professor Darlene Yee, Gerontology Coordinator:

As the J. Paul Leonard Library's collection development specialist for Gerontology, I appreciate receiving and reviewing the proposed curricular revision of the Masters of Arts (M.A.) in Gerontology. It is clear that the Library has the resources, monographs and periodicals, to support the proposed curricular revision of the M.A in Gerontology.

Furthermore, the Library presently subscribes to 225 databases --many in the fields of health and human services and social sciences, many full-text-- so faculty and students alike have access to the very latest information and literature.

San Francisco State University is fortunate that it is part of a multi-campus system. This allows access to rapid interlibrary borrowing from 22 other campuses. In addition, owing to its location in the Bay Area, faculty and students have ready access to the extensive collections of other institutions, including the University of California.

Sincerely,
