Brunel University (<http://www.brunel.ac.uk/international>)

Brunel University is a modern, dynamic institution, which prides itself on the quality of its academic programmes and the applied nature of its research activity. As a Brunel student you can expect high quality teaching in a School with a solid research record that ensures your study is relevant, up-to-the-minute and challenging. The university is dedicated to providing a world class education for its 13,000 students, which includes an international student population of more than 2,000, who come from over 113 different countries. The Design and Systems Engineering subject areas that comprise Brunel Design have an outstanding reputation for research and our degrees at all levels are some of the most renowned and respected in Europe. Department of Design at Brunel is broken down into Industrial Design, Industrial Design Engineering, Product Design, and Industrial Design and Technology.

Uxbridge:

Brunel is a campus based university, situated in the west of London. Brunel's campus is located in Uxbridge, which is only 45 minutes by underground train from central London. From its modern and self-contained surroundings, you can visit the heart of London without the expense and inconvenience of actually living there. Brunel's campus has recently been redeveloped, with over £250 million being invested in the development of new teaching and accommodation buildings, additional sports and recreation facilities and the expansion and refurbishment of key areas such as the library, giving Brunel some of the most up to date facilities to be found within London.

HOUSING:

The Accommodation Office at Brunel University has worked extensively with international exchange students. A special section of their website is devoted to information for international students about on-campus and off-campus housing. International exchange students are eligible to apply for on-campus housing, but also have the option to live in University-owned and run private apartments. Brunel can also assist in arranging homestays. For more information, visit the Brunel Accommodations Office page at:
