BOOK

Politics, Persuasion, and Pragmatism: A Rhetoric of Feminist Utopian Fiction. The Theory and Interpretation of Narrative Series. Columbus: OH State UP, 2002. The book examines how people come to believe what they do—in particular how they are influenced by reading feminist novels, especially those that represent pragmatic feminism. The book develops original theories of feminism and narrative persuasion.

WORK IN PROGRESS

The Text of the Body/The Body of the Text. The book examines texts about the physical and mental construction of human bodies. The motif is traced in Western texts from ancient times to the present. Particular attention is paid to self-referential literature in which construction of the human body parallels construction of the textual one.

RESEARCH AND TEACHING INTERESTS

18th- and 19th-century fiction (French, English); 20th- and 21st-century fiction (English, U. S.); literary theory and criticism (especially narrative, feminist, psychoanalytic, reader response); women's literature; science fiction and utopian literature; rhetorical theory; surveys of Western and world literature
